1. On 29 September 1949, Mockau airfield (E21) was not occupied by Soviet Air Force units. Local residents stated that the last planes seen were transports, which arrived during the last Leipzig Fair period. The field was not guarded on observation date.
2. Mockau airfield lies just north of Leipzig between the rail line Mockau-Delitzsch and the Autobahn. Its flight strip is concrete and measures 1,000 x 40 meters. There are also taxi strips. The remainder of the field is covered with short grass and was not damaged by wartime bombings. It is suitable for immediate use by all types of planes, including jets.
3. All main buildings and technical installations were destroyed, and the field does not have hangars, fuel storage, or night lights.
